Russell Robinson is a Professor at UC Berkeley Law. Russell Robinson's legal scholarship has highlighted the abuses LGBTQ people face in incarceration and has helped shape the conversation around the arbitrary and discriminatory processes for incarcerated LGBT people to access "protective" spaces. Robinson graduated with honors from Harvard Law School, after receiving his B.A. summa cum laude from Hampton University. Robinson clerked for Justice Stephen Breyer of the U.S. Supreme Court and Judge Dorothy Nelson of the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals.

Our current Tom Steel Fellow, Raúl Arroyo-Mendozal represents and advocates for LGBTQ youth engaged in the commercial sex trade for survival. Raúl is sponsored by National Center for Youth Law. His project will provide survivors and at-risk youth access to legal entitlements, community-based mental health services and gender-affirming medical care.
